Bat Six is a novel by author Virginia Euwer Wolff fashioned against a mid-twentieth century backdrop. The book deserves credit in that everything about its setup was intentional. Taking place four years after the conclusion of World War Two, it deals with the raw feelings left behind from that bitter struggle for Pacific supremacy.

Bat 6 is the name of an annual 6th grade girls' softball game between two neighboring Oregon towns. It was started in 1899 by the women of the two towns in an effort to get the menfolk of each town talking to each other. As this book opens, it is the beginning of the 1949 season, and girls on both teams are preparing for the big 50th annual game.
